Call for Papers

The 2nd International Conference on Global Education and E-Learning invites researchers, practitioners, policy makers, industry experts and members of professional bodies to send their abstracts for the conference on theme of “Digital Literacies and Education: Spaces, Mobilities and Practices” to be held from 15th and 16th November 2018 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Mainstream assumptions tend to impose clear divisions between modes of ‘face-to-face’ and digital education. However, with the widespread prevalence of mobile networked devices, it can be argued that these divisions are breaking down as the digital becomes an integral part of many educational settings, both formally and informally. Similarly, ‘digital’ education is often discussed without reference to individual and shared identities, and the social, political and material settings of educational practice and engagement. These assumptions may result in a limited understanding of how students, researchers and educators engage with digital literacies in a range of contexts, both in formal education and outside of it.

The International Conference on Global Education and E-Learning invites researchers, practitioners, policy makers, industry experts and members of professional bodies to contribute to this theme and develop our shared critical understandings of the educational challenges facing us in terms of the digital, in a range of contexts. We invite applicants to submit abstracts, with the opportunity to participate virtually or to present a poster available.
